

Lewis's Voice and Vision Answer Key

1. Lewis critiques The Green Book because it undermines objective value and treats moral judgments as subjective opinions. His deeper purpose is to warn that if students are taught values this way, society risks losing its foundation for truth and morality.
2. By appealing to reason, Lewis establishes credibility with an educated audience. His logical style shows that his intent is to engage thoughtful readers who are persuaded more by argument than by emotional appeal.
3. Lewis uses the "Tao" to point to a universal moral law recognized across cultures. This choice supports his purpose by showing that values are not arbitrary but grounded in something beyond individual opinion.
4. Sample completion:
"Lewis positions himself not only as a philosopher, but also as a teacher, guiding readers to recognize the necessity of preserving objective moral values."
5. Sample response:
If writing today, Lewis might warn about how online relativism and constant opinion-sharing can erode shared values. He would adapt his role as essayist by addressing modern audiences directly, using examples from social media and digital culture. His intent would remain the same: to defend the need for objective moral grounding.
