

Echoes of Lewis Answer Key

(Sample Responses)

- Restated: We expect people to live with strength and morals, but we don't train them to value those morals.

Argument: Lewis warns that education removing objective values creates people incapable of true virtue.

Significance: This quote sets the theme that without grounding in moral truth, society will collapse ethically.
- Restated: You cannot reject objective value and then build a new system of values without contradiction.

Argument: Lewis shows that even those who deny absolute truth must borrow from it to argue.

Significance: This is central to his critique of relativism—it destroys itself logically.
- Restated: The Tao means there are real truths about good and bad.

Argument: Lewis insists all civilizations rely on some form of universal moral law.

Significance: The Tao is the cornerstone of his defense of objective morality.
- Restated: Human power over nature is actually some people controlling others by means of technology.

Argument: Lewis critiques the illusion of progress, warning it can lead to domination.

Significance: This connects to his broader fear that abandoning values leads to tyranny.
- Restated: When man fully controls human nature, he risks destroying what it means to be human.

Argument: Lewis warns that unchecked manipulation of humanity could erase true freedom and morality.

Significance: This closing warning emphasizes the danger of "abolishing" man by rejecting moral law.
