Directions: Read the story carefully. Then choose the best answer (A-D) for each question.

The Quiet Zone

Eli loved both the library and the cafeteria, but he sometimes forgot how different they were. One morning, his class visited the library to check out books. Eli ran up to his friend and shouted, "Look at this one!" The librarian gently reminded him, "We use quiet voices here so everyone can read." Eli nodded and whispered an apology.

Later that day, it was lunchtime. The cafeteria was filled with laughter and talking. Eli started whispering to his friends, but they couldn't hear him. His friend Maya said, "You can talk louder here-it's okay!" Eli smiled. He realized that every place has its own kind of voice. By the end of the day, Eli knew that being quiet in the library and talking freely in the cafeteria both showed good behavior.
