Through Trojan Eyes Answer Key

The Final Duel (Turnus's Perspective):

(Sample Response) "My strength faltered as I lay beneath Aeneas's blade, and I saw the shadow of fate close in. I begged for mercy, thinking of my father who would mourn me. For a moment, I thought I might live; but then I saw the fire in his eyes as he noticed Pallas's belt. In that instant, I knew my death was sealed, and Rome's future would rise over my fallen body."
