Teacher's Guide

- Have students read each bar value before beginning the comparison questions.
- Reinforce that "how many more," "how many fewer," and "difference" usually require comparing two amounts by subtraction.
- For extra support, let students write the value of each bar beside its category before solving.
- For a challenge, cover the printed values so students must determine each amount by counting the bar units.
- Increase engagement by having students choose two bars and quiz a partner on their difference.
- Extend the activity by asking students to write one new comparison question using two categories from the graph.
