Teachers may accept any real blend word created using the provided starters and chunks.

Teacher's Guide

- Begin by reviewing the blend starters and modeling how to attach them to ending chunks to form words. Say each new word aloud to confirm it is real.
- Support students who need help by giving them one example such as bl + ock = block, then letting them try others independently.
- Challenge advanced students to sort their created words by blend family or to write sentences using three of their new words.
- Encourage engagement by turning it into a word-building race where students see how many real words they can form in a set amount of time, then compare with a partner.
