Passage (Adapted, Original)

The sunlit garden was alive with color, roses climbing over the fence and butterflies darting from bloom to bloom. Ella walked slowly along the path, her shoulders hunched and her eyes fixed on the ground. Though the air smelled sweet and warm, she pulled her jacket tighter, as if bracing against a chill. When her neighbor called out cheerfully, "Lovely day, isn't it?" Ella forced a quick smile but did not stop walking. Inside, she carried a heaviness that did not match the brightness around her.
