Urban Meets Rural

Directions: Read the passages below carefully. Then, fill in the Venn diagram to compare the two.

City Life

Cities are filled with tall buildings, busy streets, and many people. Transportation is often public, with buses, subways, and taxis carrying passengers every day. Cities have many cultural opportunities like museums, concerts, and sports arenas. However, noise and traffic can be overwhelming, and apartments are often small and expensive.

Country Life

The countryside is filled with wide-open spaces, fields, and forests. Transportation usually requires a car because places are spread far apart. Country living offers quiet, fresh air, and a close connection to nature. However, it may lack entertainment venues, and people might need to travel far for stores, schools, or hospitals.
