

Name _____

Audience Guess Game

Good prompts include clues about who they're written for.

The audience affects word choice, tone, and how much detail is included.

Read each prompt carefully and choose who you think it's written for.

1. Write a short story about a puppy who learns to share toys with friends. _____
A. Scientists B. Kindergarten students C. Business owners D. Tourists
2. Explain how the heart pumps blood through the body using correct scientific terms like "ventricle" and "artery." _____
A. Medical students B. Elementary kids C. Travelers D. Poets
3. Create a travel guide that lists five interesting places to visit in Tokyo, including food spots and local customs. _____
A. Artists B. Scientists C. Tourists D. Kindergarten teachers
4. Write a professional email to your principal explaining why your class should have more technology resources next year. _____
A. Friends B. Teachers C. Principal D. Parents
5. Describe how a plant makes its own food in a way that a third grader could understand. _____
A. College professors B. Third graders C. Scientists D. Parents
6. Prepare a safety checklist for workers who handle dangerous chemicals in a lab. _____
A. Elementary students B. Scientists C. Office workers D. Farmers
7. Write a fun, rhyming poem that explains how to wash your hands properly. _____
A. Preschoolers B. Doctors C. High schoolers D. Travelers
8. Write a formal report describing the results of your science experiment, including your data and conclusion. _____
A. Teachers B. Scientists C. Classmates D. Young children
9. Explain why recycling helps the planet and convince people in your community to start doing it more often. _____
A. Environmental activists B. The general public C. Politicians D. Children
10. Write a thank-you note to your grandmother for the birthday gift she sent you. _____
A. A friend B. A business C. Your grandmother D. A teacher