(If you don't have colors, write D, IG, IP, or E in the margin instead.)

On Friday afternoon, our class took a trip to the science museum, and everyone buzzed with excitement as we walked through the tall glass doors. The first thing we noticed was the enormous skeleton of a T-Rex towering above us. Have you ever seen something that looks so fierce? Be sure to read the labels on each display carefully. The astronomy room sparkled with glowing stars and planets, and we listened closely to the guide's explanation about galaxies. Don't touch the meteorite, because it is very fragile. Can we visit the space shuttle simulator next? Wow, that rocket looks like it could blast off right now! Before we left, we stopped at the gift shop, and I bought a small model of the solar system to remember the day.
