

Name _____

A Volunteer's Life

Directions: Read the passage carefully. Then answer the questions that follow. Some questions will test your understanding of the story, and others will ask you to choose or correct the right form of do, does, or did based on context.

When Jordan started volunteering at the animal shelter, he didn't know how much work it would involve. Every morning, he does a quick round of feeding the cats before cleaning their cages. The dogs bark excitedly when he enters, as if saying, "We do remember you!" Jordan smiles because helping animals does make him feel proud. Last weekend, however, he did make a mistake. He forgot to lock one of the kennels, and two puppies escaped into the hallway! Luckily, another volunteer caught them quickly. Jordan apologized to the supervisor, who said, "Everyone does make mistakes sometimes, but you do learn from them."

Questions:

1. What kind of place does Jordan volunteer at?

2. Which sentence from the passage uses do/does/did to express something in the past?

3. Which verb shows a present habit Jordan continues to do daily?

4. Rewrite this incorrect sentence from memory using the correct form of the verb: "He do make a mistake."

5. Write your own sentence showing emphasis using one of the verbs (do, does, or did).
