Travel Blog Takeover: Fact or Feeling? Answer Key

Facts (blue or underlined):

- Last week, I visited Washington, D.C., the capital of the United States.
- The city is home to famous landmarks like the White House and the Lincoln Memorial.
- It was built to honor Abraham Lincoln, who was the 16th president.
- There are over 70 museums in Washington, D.C., including the Smithsonian museums.
- I learned that Neil Armstrong walked on the Moon in 1969.
- We also saw the Washington Monument, which is over 550 feet tall.

Opinions (yellow or circled):

- I think the Lincoln Memorial is the most powerful monument I've ever seen.
- The Reflecting Pool nearby made the whole area feel peaceful and magical.
- The Air and Space Museum was way cooler than I expected.
- In my opinion, space travel is the most exciting thing ever discovered.
- It's honestly too tall—just looking at it made my neck hurt!
- I could spend a whole week in D.C. and still not see everything.
