Prompt Glow-Up

Sometimes a prompt starts out like a skeleton - it's got the structure, but it's missing the details. You'll see placeholders like [topic], [audience], or [format]. Your mission is to polish the placeholder by swapping in specific words that make the prompt complete, clear, and ready to use.

Here's the plan: Read the prompt with blanks. Choose smart replacements for the placeholders. Rewrite the whole prompt so it's polished and specific. Think of it like dressing up a mannequin: the frame is already there, but it's your choices that make it shine.

1. Placeholder Prompt: Explain why [invention] changed the world, but keep your explanation simple enough for [audience].

Polished Version:

2. Placeholder Prompt: Summarize the main causes of [historical event] in [number] paragraphs.

Polished Version:

3.Placeholder Prompt: Compare [sport] and [sport] by listing at least [number] similarities and differences.

Polished Version:

4. Placeholder Prompt: Create a step-by-step guide for [task] written as if you are explaining it to [audience].

Polished Version:

5. Placeholder Prompt: Write a story about [character type] who tries to solve [problem] in [setting].

Polished Version: