

Name _____

Young Voices Rising

Directions: Read the passage below about young people standing up for human rights. Then, answer the questions that follow in complete sentences.

Around the world, many young people are proving that age does not limit courage. In Pakistan, Malala Yousafzai spoke out for girls' right to go to school, even when others told her to stay silent. In the United States, a group of students organized peaceful marches to protest unfair treatment of their communities. In Kenya, young inventors designed water filters to help families access clean water - a basic human right.

Though their actions look different, their goals are the same: fairness, equality, and respect for every person. These young leaders remind us that standing up for what's right doesn't require fame or power. It starts with one brave voice - and a belief that everyone deserves to live free from fear and injustice.

Comprehension Questions:

1. What issue did Malala Yousafzai fight for?

---

2. What did the students in the United States do to support human rights?

---

3. Why did the young inventors in Kenya design water filters?

---

4. What common goal do all of the young leaders share?

---

5. What does the author mean by "standing up for what's right doesn't require fame or power"?

---