Two Sides Of A Race

Directions: Read the passage carefully, noticing how different characters might view the same scene. Draw the scene two times: once from Emma's perspective and the other from the Lily's perspective. Then, write 2-3 sentences explaining how each character might see or feel about the scene differently.

The final race of the school track meet was about to begin. Emma stood at the starting line, her legs trembling with nerves but her eyes locked on the finish. She heard the roar of the crowd, though it all blurred into one steady hum in her ears. Just behind the bleachers, her best friend Lily gripped the railing, bouncing on her toes with excitement. Lily's heart raced almost as fast as if she were the one competing. She waved and shouted encouragement, hoping Emma could hear her above the noise. The starter raised his arm, the pistol glinting in the sun, and a hush fell over the stadium. Emma took a deep breath, ready to sprint, while Lily clasped her hands together, silently cheering with every ounce of hope.
