The School Garden

At Lincoln Elementary, students worked together to build a school garden. They planted tomatoes, cucumbers, and lettuce in neat rows. A group of fourth graders built wooden boxes to hold the soil. Each class took turns watering the plants and pulling weeds. The principal, Mrs. Carter, often walked by to admire the progress. The garden quickly became a favorite place for science lessons and reading time. By late spring, the students harvested fresh vegetables to share in the cafeteria. Everyone agreed that the garden brought beauty and teamwork to the school.
