Power Of Equality

Directions: Think about what equality means in your life, school, or community. Write a persuasive paragraph explaining why equality still matters today and how people, both young and old, can help make it stronger. Use facts, emotions, or examples to convince your readers to take action for fairness and respect.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. dreamed of a world where everyone would be treated fairly, no matter their race, background, or beliefs. His dream continues today, but it still takes effort to make it real. You have the power to speak up, include others, and help build the kind of world Dr. King imagined.

Write one persuasive paragraph (at least 5-7 sentences) answering these questions as part of your writing:

- Why does equality still matter today?
- What can people do to support equality in daily life?
- How can you personally make a difference?

Use strong words, clear reasoning, and examples to inspire others to care about fairness and unity.
