The Autumn Festival

The town's autumn festival was the highlight of the year, filled with food, games, and music. Clara, who had been practicing violin for months, was nervous but excited to play on stage for the first time. Her brother, Daniel, preferred adventure and signed up for the pie-eating contest instead. Their friend, Lila, painted colorful signs and hung them around the festival to guide visitors to the right booths. Meanwhile, Mr. Lopez, the kindly shopkeeper, organized the lantern parade, reminding everyone to carry candles safely. As the evening ended, Clara's music filled the square, Daniel proudly wore blueberry stains on his shirt, Lila smiled at the glowing signs she had created, and Mr. Lopez watched the lanterns float into the starry sky with joy.
