Expected Key Discussion Points:

- Heroes can come from many walks of life—soldiers, first responders, activists, teachers, or ordinary citizens showing extraordinary bravery.
- Memorial Day reminds us that courage often involves sacrifice for a greater good.
- Students may connect modern heroism to qualities like compassion, selflessness, integrity, and persistence.
- The discussion should highlight respect, gratitude, and the lasting influence of past heroes on current values.

Quick Tips for Differentiation:

- Grades 9-10: Provide sentence starters or guiding questions (e.g., "Is bravery always physical?").
- Grades 11-12: Have students research and reference real examples of modern heroism.
- Advanced students: Encourage use of rhetorical devices such as repetition, analogy, or emotional appeal.

Engagement Ideas:

- Hold a "Hero Circle Debate" where students share and defend their definitions of heroism.
- Play a short video or read a quote from a Medal of Honor recipient to inspire the discussion.
- Display words like "sacrifice," "duty," "honor," and "courage" around the classroom as visual prompts.

Extension Ideas:

- Assign a reflective essay: "How does courage shape a nation's identity?"
- Encourage students to write a short tribute speech honoring someone they believe embodies true heroism.
