The Garden Project

At Maplewood Middle School, the science club decided to plant a community garden behind the library. The students researched which plants would grow best in their region's climate. They chose tomatoes, carrots, beans, and lettuce because these vegetables are healthy and easy to care for. Every Saturday morning, club members watered the soil, pulled weeds, and checked for insects. Parents often visited to bring tools, snacks, and extra seeds. By the end of summer, the garden produced enough food to share with the cafeteria and a local food bank. The project showed how teamwork, planning, and dedication can create something beneficial for everyone.

1. List four to six important details from the passage.
2. Build an acronym from those words (using the first letters).
