Text Evidence Forecast

Strong predictions are not just guesses. Good readers use proof from the text to back up their thinking. A solid prediction has two parts: the prediction (what you think will happen) and the proof (the text clues that support it).

Directions: Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow.

Amira peeked out the window and saw the gray clouds gathering. She heard the rumble of thunder in the distance. Quickly, she grabbed her soccer cleats and stuffed them into her bag. 'I hope practice doesn't get canceled,' she muttered.

1. Write your prediction: What do you think will happen next in the story?

2. Find at least two text clues that support your prediction.

3. Explain in 2-3 sentences how these clues led you to your prediction.
