Teacher Notes

- Stress that the web shows relationships, not just names. Students should explain how each supporting character interacts with the main character.
- Accept variations in phrasing as long as the connections are accurate (e.g., "Chloe invited Ella to play" or "Chloe made her feel welcome").
- Extension idea: Ask students to add another circle for Ella's feelings and describe how her connections changed those feelings.
- Differentiation: Younger students can draw stick figures with arrows showing the connections; older students can expand the web with more detail (e.g., traits of each character).
