Teamwork On The Job

Directions: Read the passage about teamwork in different careers. Then answer the questions that follow.

Teamwork is a key skill in nearly every career. In emergency response jobs, such as firefighting or paramedics, working as a team can save lives. Each person has a specific task, like handling equipment, giving first aid, or directing others to safety. When everyone communicates clearly and trusts one another, they can solve problems quickly under pressure.

In a restaurant, teamwork looks different but is just as important. Cooks, servers, and hosts must communicate to make sure food arrives correctly and on time. If one person doesn't do their part, the whole team can fall behind. Successful restaurant teams rely on respect, cooperation, and quick thinking.

Even in office jobs, teamwork plays a major role. Employees might work together to plan events, manage projects, or solve customer issues. Listening, staying organized, and helping coworkers are all teamwork traits that lead to success. No matter what the job is, being a dependable team member makes a big difference.
