Teacher's Guide

- Review the concepts of capitals, landmarks, landforms, and regions before students begin.
- Encourage students to use context clues from each answer choice.
- Allow students to solve independently first, then review as a class.

Differentiation Tips

- Provide a map of the United States for students who need visual support.
- Read questions aloud for students who benefit from audio reinforcement.
- Challenge advanced learners to explain why the other three answer choices are incorrect.

Engagement Ideas

- After the worksheet, ask students to vote on the most interesting state fact and briefly discuss why.
- Create a classroom display where students add one fact they know about any state.

Extension Activities

- Assign each student a state to research. They can share three new facts with the class.
- Have students write their own multiple choice questions about a U.S. state and exchange them with partners.
