Teacher's Guide

- Before beginning, review the three endings -st, -sk, and -sp, saying each aloud and having students echo them.
- Encourage students to read the base of the word first, then try each of the three endings to see which one creates a meaningful or most familiar word.
- Provide support by modeling one example and showing how to blend the final sound smoothly with the base word.
- For extension, have students write a short list of new words that end in each of the three blends or choose one completed word to illustrate.
